WHERE TO START

Before you begin shopping for your new bath, do a little homework. It will help to clarify your goals and prepare for the questions a Floor To Ceiling[®] design professional will ask you in order to create the right plan for you.

Do a Personal Survey

It is helpful to start a scrapbook of ideas collected from magazines, websites and other sources. Share it with your Floor To Ceiling[®] designer. (If you are contemplating built-in cabinetry for an entertainment center or other furniture, the same is true. Plus an accurate measurement of all the objects you want to store or display in your new furniture, such as computer components or video/audio equipment.) Your collection of ideas and specifications will save time and help the designer turn your priorities and your dreams into reality. As with every worthwhile project, careful planning is one of the keys to achieving success.

An honest assessment of the kitchen or bath you now have is a good place to start. Identify the problems in the current color scheme, design layout or storage. Write down what you want to improve in the new room. For a built-in furniture project, you may not be replacing existing cabinetry or furniture but it is a decided advantage to take time to assess the basics of how you want the new built-ins to look and function.

To help you think through issues, take the Bath Assessment Survey. When you have completed your Assessment Survey, return to this page. You'll be ready to answer the questions below.

1. What is my most important goal for remodeling the bathroom? Answers might include updating the style, adding counter or storage space, enlarging the space, add seating space, etc.
2. What do I like about the current design? Answers might be the floor tile, the double bowl sink, etc.
3. What do I dislike most about the current room? Answers might be not enough counter work space, the out-dated appearance, etc.
4. Do I plan to stay in this home for 5, 10 or more years? This is important and should influence your choices. If you are remodeling the room for your own convenience over a long period, it makes sense to go for the gold. If the goal is to make your home a better candidate for resale, you may want to make the room more attractive but with a more modest investment.

Questions to Ask Your Floor To Ceiling® designer:

You have a clear set of goals in mind and your folder or scrapbook of ideas at hand. Now you are ready to ask some questions of the professional design specialist to help you decide how to proceed toward your new bath. Your Floor To Ceiling® design specialist is prepared to provide guidance in planning your project. The designer may have additional questions for you to think about. Once you have worked together to establish the scope of the project you will be better able to estimate the investment you will need to make to bring it to completion.

Can you provide tear-out and installation services?

Most Floor To Ceiling® stores can provide tear-out and installation service by either a trusted sub-contractor or its own staff.

1. What happens to my old appliances and cabinets? You may want to consider re-using some of your discarded cabinets or counters in your garage or another area. Whether this is feasible or not depends on the manner in which they were originally constructed and installed. Your contractor or Floor To Ceiling® installer will need to inspect the current condition in order to make a recommendation.
2. How long does it take to receive products that have been ordered? Everyone is anxious to get started once the project has been designed and the order placed. But, don't plunge into tearing out existing materials until all of the new materials for your project have arrived. Your design specialist will coordinate delivery and installation of all products you order from Floor To Ceiling® so you will not be without service for longer than is necessary.
3. What kind of payment schedule do you require? Is there financing available? Most local Floor To Ceiling® stores do have financing available. Ask for the details!
4. Can Floor To Ceiling® help you work with a contractor or architect I have chosen? Floor To Ceiling® stores are happy to cooperate with the architect or contractor of your choice.
5. Are there any products or services needed for this project that cannot be purchased from Floor To Ceiling®? You will be delighted at the variety of products and brands available from Floor To Ceiling® - from the floor covering, right up to the cove molding at the ceiling! Since it is not possible to display every product in every style in the showroom, if you don't see it – be sure to ask!
